

Report conversation

could you suggest a name for a policyengine variable that represents the main income used for computing pell grants? this is parental income (both parents combined) under the formula that bases pell grants on parental income, or student/spouse income under the formulas that base it on that. we currently have `pell_grant_head_income` but that implies it disregards the spouse's income (either parent 2 or student's spouse) given taxes distinguish head and spouse

Certainly! A variable name that encompasses both parental income and student/spouse income for computing Pell Grants could be `pell_grant_base_income`. This name conveys the idea that it serves as the foundational income figure for determining eligibility and is inclusive of all potential contributors (parents, students, or spouses) without distinguishing between them.

3 more options

Certainly! Here are three more options for the variable name:

1. `pell_grant_combined_income`
2. `pell_grant_family_income`
3. `pell_grant_applicant_income`

These names aim to capture the essence of the income being used, whether it's coming from parents, student, or spouse, and align with the need for neutrality and objectivity.

well so the thing is it explicitly doesn't count the student's income if it uses the formula that bases pell grants on parental income

Understood! Thank you for clarifying the requirements. Based on that information, here are three revised options:

1. `pell_grant_primary_income`
2. `pell_grant_responsible_income`
3. `pell_grant_eligible_income`

These names are designed to reflect the income used for computing Pell Grants, focusing on the primary sources, which could be parental income or student/spouse income depending on the specific formula being applied.