'siyoh binofsha',
'siyoh binofsha rang',
"to'q sariq",
'yashil',
'zaytun rang',

These are Uzbek terms for various colors, and they all represent valid colors. Here's a translation and brief explanation for each:

- binofsha: violet
- buniq: a specific color that doesn't have a direct equivalent in English but could be a unique shade (not a standard color name in English)
- fayruz rang: turquoise color

- ko'k: blue
- ko'k-binofsha rang: blue-violet color
- krem rang: cream color
- kulrang: gray
- kumush rang: silver color
- limon rang: lemon color (light yellow)
- moviy: navy blue
- oq: white
- osmon rang: sky color (light blue)
- oltin rang: gold color
- pushti: pink
- qizil: red
- qizil-kulrang: red-gray
- qizil-siyoh binofsha: a red to purple shade, likely a deep purplish-red
- qizg'ish to'q sariq: reddish bright yellow
- qora: black
- sariq: yellow
- sariq-kulrang: yellow-gray
- siyoh binofsha: deep purple
- siyoh binofsha rang: deep purple color
- to'q sariq: bright yellow
- yashil: green
- zaytun rang: olive color

The term "buniq" seems to be the only one without a clear, direct translation, possibly due to transliteration issues or it being a specific shade not widely recognized outside of certain contexts. The rest are well-established color names.
